

ALEXANDRIA, VA.
MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 11.

FROM WASHINGTON.

(Special Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., April 11, 1862.

The death of General Field creates a vacancy in the office of the "Rebellion Recorder," which, of course, will be filled for ex-Confederate. Among the applicants for the office are General Dabney Maury of Richmond, and Gen. Lomax, of Fauquier county, Virginia. Col. Wilbur Reid of Alexandria, in the same State, is spoken of in connection with the vacancy in the civil service commission created by the resignation of Gov. Thompson of South Carolina.

A private dispatch received here from Statesville, N. C., says that at a public discussion there last Saturday between democratic and third party orators, the republicans united with the latter, as was natural, for one of the principles of the third party is that southern people shall be taxed to give the soldiers who impoverished them the difference between gold and the greenbacks in which they were paid during the war.

The U. S. Supreme Court to-day decided that a man who does not travel, but who has an office in which samples of goods made in other States are exhibited, and who sells by other States, must not only pay a license, but a commission on his sales, if he is provided by the laws of the State in which his office is located.

In the Senate to-day Mr. Palmer, a candidate for the democratic Presidential nomination, introduced a bill to remove the limitations to the payment of arrears of pensions.

Congressman Wise, of Virginia, says he will avail himself of the opportunity to be afforded during the debate on one of the tariff bills, to express his views about the refusal of the United States and Brazil to give steamships a line subsidized by that government, to land coffee at Newport News, because such landing is objectionable to New York coffee importers.

In the House to-day Mr. Wise had a bill passed making West Point, King William county, Virginia, a sub-post of city of the Richmond district, and to empower the inspector there to act as deputy collector.

In the Senate to-day Mr. Hoar from the judiciary committee reported to the Senate a bill to establish a Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

At the same investigation to day it was proved that getting money and not doing work was the chief object of nearly all the employees of the pension bureau, and that detectives were employed to watch the clerks who talked to newspaper correspondents. Two clerks in that bureau refused to answer the questions propounded to them, and the committee adopted a resolution requesting their removal.

In the Senate to-day Mr. Morgan introduced a resolution requesting the President to supply Congress with certain information in respect of the commercial relations between this country and Haiti and Germany, which, if supplied, will do the administration no good.

Conference.

The continuing of the balloting for the selection of delegates to the general conference occupied most of the session of the M. P. conference at Potomac City, Md., on Saturday, and but little else was done.

Thus far four ballots have been taken, but the election of only eight delegates out of eighteen to be chosen is the result. On Friday five ministers and one lay delegates were elected. The committee stated that they recognized the importance of the question of superannuates and recommended earnest efforts to increase both the invested funds and the collections. These recommendations were adopted.

Sad Drowning.

BOSTON, April 11.—An instructor and 10 boys connected with the Boston farm school at Thompson's Island, were capsized in a sail boat last night, and the instructor and eight of the boys drowned. The instructor had been to the city during the day to attend church and the 10 boys, constituting a regular crew of the school, left the island at 6:30 to sail to City Point to convey the instructor to the island. When off Spectacle Island the boat was struck by a gale and immediately capsized and the 11 occupants were thrown into the ice cold water. The night was cold and the shores and wharves were abandoned. The chill of the water and the exertion necessary to keep their heads above the surface overcame the unfortunate and one by one they were compelled to relinquish their hold. According to the testimony of the two survivors, they encouraged each other, occasionally shouting in the hope that they might be heard by some one on shore. The instructor was the first to go. Each offered a prayer or a word of farewell to the others as he gave up his hold on life. Some of them endured the unequal contest for nearly four hours and it was about 11 o'clock when the boat with the two survivors still clinging to it was discovered and the boys rescued.

Confederate Veterans.

The reunion of the United Confederate Veterans ended at New Orleans on Saturday with a parade. There were eight thousand veterans in line on foot, besides a large number of the disabled and crippled in carriages. Every camp carried Confederate war flags, and the buildings throughout the line of march were profusely decorated with bunting, the Confederate and the United States flags being equal in proportion.

The march was about two miles long, and from end to end the men were greeted with cheers. It was almost impossible to hear the bands that were playing "Dixie," "The Bonnie Blue Flag," "My Maryland," and other Confederate airs. The parade was reviewed in front of the city hall.

One division was composed of the disabled veterans. The Texas contingent was a feature. It had several thousand men in line. Mrs. Davis was much touched by the Texans' devotion, and kissed the torn and tattered battle flag carried by the Lone Star veterans. She gave the wives and daughters of the Texans a special reception at Washington Artillery Association last night, which closed the reunion.

The boys tried to get out of the way. Hallie McQuade got between the standing wagon and the fence into an angle. Just then the front wheel of the other wagon struck the hind wheel of the standing wagon, and the horse, becoming frightened at the noise, darted to one side, throwing the wagon against the fence and catching the head of young McQuade between the rim of the wheel and the fence, crushing his skull. He died in a few seconds. The little fellow was a bright, attractive and handsome child, and the idol of his parents.

The general list remained dull and featureless, and at 11 o'clock the market was quiet and steady to firm generally at fractional advances over first prices.
